Our Mission

Guided by the belief in the inherent dignity of all persons, the Pulte Family Charitable Foundation works to meet the basic human needs of the most marginalized members of the human family, including socio-economically disadvantaged youth; the aged; persons with physical, emotional and mental disabilities; and those with the fewest material resources. In addition to the above, the Foundation seeks to serve religious communities and correlative organizations of Judeo-Christian beliefs.

What We Fund

The Foundation strives to enact through its grantees the seven-corporeal works of mercy: feed the hungry; give drink to the thirsty; clothe the naked; care for captives; shelter the homeless; visit the sick; and assist the mourning.

How We Give

The Pulte Family Charitable Foundation considers grant proposals that advance the quality of life for religious communities and their correlative organizations of Judeo-Christian beliefs; socio-economically disadvantaged youth; the aged; persons with physical, emotional and mental disabilities; and those with the fewest material resources.

The Foundation makes grants regardless of race, creed, gender or, sexual preference. Following the Founder's Judeo-Christian religious and moral beliefs, the Foundation will not give monies to organizations that directly or indirectly, through their subsidiaries, support research, programming, and services that disregard the inherent dignity of all persons, from which follows the right to life from conception to natural death.

What Comes Next?

Once you submit the grant application, the Foundation will review all the materials. The Foundation's Grantmaking Committee will consider the request during its meetings in May and November. Grants will be made in June and December.

Given that the problems we seek to address are complex and that our resources are small compared to these challenges, we are unable to fund all the proposals that we receive.
